Random Hour.

A compilation of stories of my life by ME! Eddie Spider-Plush.

100% of the truth comes out.

Possibly the worst thing you'll ever read.

Chapters:

1. Introduction. 2
2. Chapter 1. 4
3. Amazing Friends. 8
4. Consoomerism. 16
   4.1. Webbed Wonders. 20
5. I am terminally online 24
6. Locked. 27
7. Plush Hour. 31
8. A post-6/11 society. 35
9. Figuring things out. 38
10. Brand New Day. 45
11. Eddium Arcadium. 47
   11.1. How I fell in love with Sue Storm. 50
12. Interviews. 51
   12.1. Polly. 51
   12.2. Camden. 53
   12.3. Water. 55
   12.4. Abraham. 57
   12.5. Starlight. 58
   12.6. KlonoaPrime. 60
   12.7. Snake. 62
13. Some other funny stories. 64
   13.1. Evil Spider-Man Recap. 67
   13.2. Deranged Ramblings. 72
   13.3. Things that never made it. 76
14. Reflecting and other thoughts I had while writing. 78
15. Credits. 80

Introduction:

Having to come up with something for an anniversary can be a difficult task, or at least it is for me, and since I don’t use the website anymore, I was about to just let the 5th anniversary be forgotten, I mean, it’s not like people were gonna care anyway…

But then I remembered… Eddie, no one knows jack shit about you, the most they know is that you like plushies, that you like Spider-Man, that you’re mexican, that you’re young, and that you like Sue Storm, so at this point, why not just write your entire life?

And so, writing begins on September 19th, 2025, at 12:04 PM.

Hello, you, it’s me, Eddie. I made this because today, October 27th, is the 5-Year Anniversary of my dumbass little Twitter page, and I couldn’t just be silent about it, so I am writing this now and you’re gonna like it, mister… Or miss… Or whatever.

I suppose my main inspirations for writing this memoir were the several biographies I was forced to read for my homework, and I wanted to make one for myself so that I can remember the good times and the bad times when I’m old and senile, and so that they can be documented.

All of the information in this memoir was gotten through zero family interviews, a few friend interviews, and through my own memory. I mean, I wouldn’t lie about anything in my own autobiography, right?
Some may think it's a stupid idea to make an autobiography of someone that is only 18 years old and hasn't experienced much or even achieved anything, but hey, what else was I supposed to do for this big occasion?

This was originally meant to only cover 2016-2025, but I eventually decided my entire life story was worth telling just because I see this as a way to stop being so mysterious about everything all the time.

By the way, this is not formatted or written like a book because it is not meant to be such, this is just supposed to be a text I wrote.

Chapter 1.

On the night (or probably the day) of April 25th, 2007, Little teensy weensy Eduardo was born in a clinic that not even my mother remembers, but what I do know is that I was born in beautiful Tijuana, Baja California, Mexico, and I know that because I have lived here my whole life, I don't think we've ever moved.

I lived with my parents, my brother and sister, and my grandparents… Why is this in the past tense, Eddie, you still live with them.

My parents were (and are) hardworking people who always did and sacrificed whatever they could to make sure I was a happy kid, and it worked. I remember that I used to stay with my dad at his workplace after kindergarten and it was very fun.

My mom is one of those people that plays Zelda games and puzzle games like this one called Royal Match. My dad was surprisingly pretty skilled at drawing and he also always knew how to make me laugh.

My sister (The oldest one of us) always wanted to be an actress and she did sorta achieve that. She's into anime and video games and books and she's a total nerd.

My brother is an artist, he knows the ins and outs of drawing, and even if he doesn't think he's good at it, he really is and I love seeing his art. He also loves animation and he knows a little bit about how to animate, he doesn't do it very often but when he does, it's pretty damn cool.

I don't have any of the skills that my siblings have, and I'm not very creative, which is why my AO3 page is abandoned and full of dust.

My childhood was pretty happy, I watched Disney movies, I went to the park, I did normal kid stuff.

One thing worthy of note, was that my father used to show me these things called superhero movies, and the first one that he decided to show to me was this wonderful red and blue costume hero called… Superman. I can't say I remember seeing Superman for the first time but what I do remember, and one of the memories I cherish the most was when my father went to a BlockBuster and picked up some of the best superhero movies ever… That's right, the Sam Raimi Spider-Man trilogy. I recall that vividly, seeing this man that could crawl walls and shoot webs, it was… Amazing! There, you can stop reading now.

Child me was fucking hooked on Spider-Man and Marvel instantly, I think we watched like nearly all of the 2000's Marvel movies with the exception of Man-Thing and Elektra because those suck.

Surprisingly enough, Spider-Man wasn't my favorite at first, but instead it was the Incredible Hulk, I loved seeing his 1970's iteration, the Ang Lee movie and the MCU Louis Leterrier version, I also was able to learn a lot of comic book lore as soon as I was able to use a computer at age… I think 6? I only used it to look up flash games or Spider-Man images…

Outside of superheroes, I was just a normal bratty kid that you'd see in cartoons, I was sometimes a real bad kid, sometimes an A student, pretty mixed… Though I guess I was stupider than the average kid, now that I think about it.

My first exposure to video games was through the Nintendo Wii that I still have and still works, and some of the games I really enjoyed the most were the Mario series. Some of my cousins were really into Mario and they had plenty of the games and stuff. I didn't really know how to play these games until I was like 10 but I still had fun, and I know Shigeru Miyamoto would be proud of me for having fun playing Mario Kart.

One experience that I remember fondly was my mom making these educational powerpoint presentations with cool looking transitions featuring Marvel characters like Hulk and Iron Man teaching science and roman numerals. It was just great.

Traveling was fun, but the most I ever experienced in the United States was going to a Walmart and some kinda book store where I got FNAF plushies and some Fidget Spinners. I was a weird kid. (I also traveled to other fun places in Mexico, those were fun, you guys should visit Rosarito one day.)

A happy childhood. I was just too bratty for my own good at times, I guess.

Holidays were always fun, Valentine's Day was a day about relationships and friendship, nowadays it's a day for couples to give chocolates and for lonely people to be really mad. At school we had to give kind letters to our classmates… I got less letters than most of the class but that just makes the letters I did get more meaningful.

Easter was okay, I mean, we didn't celebrate it every year but when we had to find those damn eggs, we did the craziest detective work you could ever imagine.

Birthdays were fun, whether it was yours or a family member's birthday, you knew you could have fun. Though, my birthday was fascinating to me because it was a holiday for ME! It was just great.

4th of July was- I'm just kidding, I'm Mexican.

Halloween was great. Me being me, I would dress up as Spider-Man, and I went trick-or-treating. Ever since the pandemic happened, I now find myself in the giving part of "Trick-or-treat" and I don't wear a costume nowadays because I'm in poor shape and don't wanna be the laughing stock of my family (Again.)

Dia de los muertos is always fun, though there’s not many deaths to mourn here so we just eat food.

I remember staying up on christmas eve with my cousins because we knew we could open our presents at midnight, I never exactly got what I wanted, but hey, I was a happy child most of the time.

I celebrate New Years like everyone else. Oh, and I fucking love tamales.

Family gatherings are great, I guess, but I always get made fun of or insulted by someone and when my family members watch soccer it’s always so loud and I can’t concentrate on anything.

Speaking of sports, I was never a very athletic person, I don’t really do sports because I am a fatty fatty fuck fuck, but I like walking and running and lifting heavy stuff.

I think that’s all I could mention for this chapter.

Chapter 2. Amazing Friends.

During my first few years of school, I kind of struggled to make friends. Probably because during preschool, I was pretty much the only kid to be super into Marvel, I mean, there were some kids that were into Spider-Man and such but none were as dedicated as I was and I wasn't really liked by the other kids or even the teachers.

I remember one time I brought a Hulk toy to school, and the teacher saw it and snatched it away for a couple months (probably just a week, but time moved really slow for me) but I eventually got it back, but it left a bit of a trauma for me because for years, I never took toys to school again… How the fuck was I supposed to know that I wasn't allowed to bring my epic Hulk toy to school?

A group of people that didn't like me in particular were the girls. I remember this one girl that really hated me, and she was always the one I would get paired up with. I don't recall ever doing anything to her, so I have no clue why she didn't particularly like me. There were other girls that either dismissed me or just didn't like me… Except for this nice sweet young girl named Emma who was just so kind and I'll always appreciate that.

P.E. class was one I wasn't particularly fond of because I wasn't very athletic and there was this group of like 4 or 5 kids that really fucking enjoyed bullying and bothering the fucking shit out of me. I didn't even realize it was bullying until much later on in life, however, I don't resent those kids because eventually we did bond over Minecraft and the other popular games at the time.

There was this kid, his name was Jose-Maria, and he was the sweetest guy ever, and we were good friends that talked about life and he was genuinely nice to me. However, one day he had to move to a different school, and I was completely devastated. I also knew this guy, I don't even remember his name, I think it started with the letter R, and he was obsessed with Halo. He got in trouble sometimes but we were still pals… I think he must've gotten expelled or something because I never saw him again.

I could say recess was fun… But there were some major setbacks, for example, my brother's classmates, who always chased me to fucking annoy me and pinch my cheeks because they thought I was the cutest thing ever or something. I remember one time I hid under a table so they wouldn't find me and that is how I met some older kids that I eventually became friends with and talked about video games and such.

The teachers were either really cranky or the nicest people you'll ever meet, for example, my English teachers, there was one of them that was just always so nice to me and she always knew how to teach us about words and meanings, and this made learning English FUN. I loved English class and now that I'm in college, I really miss those classes because I was the absolute best, an A student.

Near the end of elementary school, I was forced to change schools for old bullying reasons, and I just didn't know how to tell my classmates because I was hated by ⅔ of the classroom, which meant that they probably either said "Good riddance" or "I never knew how much I missed Eddie until he was gone".

One time, a keychain fell off my backpack, and my teacher saw it and went "Hey, give me that shit" and then she made me give my cool Hulk keychain, and she kept it, and I never saw that keychain again. I miss my keychain.

I remember that there was this kid, his name was Brandon, and I remember that we were kinda frenemies, and I was just a complete jackass to this poor kid at times, until one time I walked up to him, I don't remember why I wanted to talk to him, and he was like "I don't want you to talk to me again" and it really made me reflect that day, I felt like shit for the rest of the day.

I knew this guy, his name was Jesus, and he was also into Sonic and Nintendo games, like I was, and we were pretty good friends. I remember one time, he knocked a tooth of mine by accident but I wasn't mad or anything, more surprised because it didn't hurt.

I was like 11 when this happened, so I didn't really have a way to communicate with my friends during summer breaks and I didn't think my parents would let me invite them to the house or let me go to their house. I eventually regained communication with Rodrigo, who used to be my absolute best friend in those days, which is cool. I remember how I met this man, it was the first day of school, and I just waved at this kid, and his mom was there and asked "Do you know this kid?" and he said "No." and then we started talking and we became buddies.

My last year of elementary school was more of the same old crap, I was hated by like ⅔ again, I had like 2 or 3 friends and I was sorta kinda bullied. I met this kid named Sammy, he was a YouTuber and loved Nintendo games like I did… But then we eventually had a falling out for some unknown reason… And after that we got along again and we still sometimes communicate.

But let me tell you something about this school, my first few years of elementary school were in a private school, which meant that only the finest smartest kids could be there and if you did so much as to say anything close to a swear word in another language, you went to the principal's office… Sometimes a swear word would slip out of my mouth but no one would hear it so in the end, I won.

For my last year, I went to a public school, and for the first few months, we were like "Okay, there's a few swear words here or there but nothing too serious" but that all changed when we heard about puberty and all the changes we go through… I legit could not go through one day without hearing anyone make a sex joke, which is why I kind of built an intolerance for sex jokes and that's why I don't do them so often.

I remember one class, we were learning about parenting (at age 12) and we had to bring an egg to take care of. This wouldn't have been so bad if it was like a 1 or 2, maybe even a 3 day project, but we had to take care of this damn egg with decoration, clothes and a house nicer than mine for a fucking month, and it was hell, you wanted to name your egg "Name"? FUCK YOU! You gotta name it Eddie Jr. You forget the damn egg in your house only one time? You were yelled at by your teacher and your partner for the entire fucking day. This damn egg in a house was so fucking clunky and annoying and legitimately made me contemplate dropping out. You wanna know what I did when this damn project was over? At the end of the class, I fucking threw this egg across the street, even after my partner specifically told me to not throw it away.

Junior High was pretty fun when it first started. I made friends with someone that always smelled like a septic tank, and they liked Anime and loli shit… Okay, maybe I shouldn't have been hanging out with that guy. I remember NOT being hated by ⅔ of the classroom, I was actually well liked by most of my classmates and I really had fun most of the time.

One experience that I still think about sometimes was about this loli lover kid. It was during the time of the Covid lockdown, very late at night, in the school group chat… This kid tags me to ask for help! Well, I'm a giving person, and very willing to help, so I asked him what's up, and he told me that he needs help to befriend this 11 year old… He then goes on to tell a very creepy story about this child… And after that I told him to fuck off and never spoke to him for the rest of the school year. First of all, did the rest of the class NEED to know this? Second of all, what the fuck am I supposed to do? I don't know this 11 year old, and I don't WANT to know them, fuck off, dude.

I guess the rest of this Junior High thing went smoothly when we eventually came back, I even made a new friend group that I still sometimes talk to when I'm feeling really bored.

There was this funny experience, where nearly the entire school was getting ready to go fight all because one kid caught another flirting with his girlfriend… They all chickened out and the principal told the entire school to "Not have girlfriends" Well, no need to worry about me getting one because I'm ugly!

High School was one of my favorite school experiences, though very early on was not great because I struggled to get along with the other classmates at first, but that all changed when a bunch of girls saw me all miserable in my desk and decided that I should sit with them, and we instantly started talking about life and stuff we cared about, it was great. I also made many new friends that I still enjoy hanging out to this day and you might see them in the special thanks section.

This is a story that someone told me, but during my first semester, there were these girls talking about other classmates, and they asked "Is Eddie mentally challenged?" and right as they said that, I was walking by. I didn't hear them, but it was a funny story… But kinda sad.

My last day of high school was pretty fun, we had some carne asada at a park near the school, and we all celebrated and stuff, it was great. I remember that we didn't rent the space where the carne asada took place and the security guard was like "What the fuck, get out" but the other kids bribed him with tacos and we were fine.

Two friends I like hanging out with often are Andres and Sebastian, they were the first friends I hung out with outside of school, and the first friends that ever let me into their houses. Every once in a while we hang out and I remember we used to visit the mall very often. I make them laugh and they make me laugh. We even have this secret club with like 30 more friends, and you can't join!

I knew this guy that everyone called Chuy, he was really into Sonic and Dragon Ball and we were chill and stuff because I also liked those things.

Right now in college, I'm kinda lonely and struggling to make new friends but I am slowly getting along with my classmates.

I have decided to talk about my online social interactions in a different chapter down the line. Smiley face.

Love life? What love life? Well, it's a little complicated but also less complicated than you'd expect. I've never had a girlfriend, and I know it would be nice to have one, to have a partner that supports you emotionally and you get to bond with and do stuff together sounds just great… I just don't think I need it. I've never felt ready for romance, and I just puke at the idea of myself flirting. My family at one point started wondering if I was asexual or gay, to which I just said "I'm not ready for that stuff". Just because I don't express that I have feelings for someone doesn't mean that I don't feel those things.

I'm not a particularly attractive person physically and I don't think I'm mature enough to handle a very intimate bond with anyone, and I certainly don't think any ladies will feel attracted to someone who dedicates his free time to watching Spider-Man movies and playing video games. I am also incredibly unorganized. My room is always a mess, I'm incredibly lazy and I'm not very smart or funny. (and I'm also broke)

There's a few silly experiences that I thought were worth sharing, and here they are:

One time my dad told me we had to meet some friends and there was this girl, and my dad said "Hey, this is your girlfriend, don't you remember?" and I did not remember. Never saw her again.

During elementary school, there was this classmate that forced me to mention a crush of mine so I just mentioned one girl I thought was pretty, but then the girl that fucking hated me was like “What the fuck, you like my best friend? I hate you even more now” and I was like “Oh no, how bad for me” (sarcastically)

One time I blew a kiss at a girl that I knew hated me and thought I was a jackass just because I thought her reaction would be funny as shit. She was like “EWWW, I’M GONNA TELL ON YOU” and she never did tell on me. I don’t think she ever spoke to me again. Good.

There was this girl classmate of mine, she was very pretty and cute and stuff but I never ever bothered to mention it to anyone because I knew how bratty my classmates would be if I did. I remember that as a joke, 2 other classmates were like “Oh, Eddie, This cute girl wants your instagram and she likes you and stuff” and I was gonna give her my Instagram but I ultimately never did because I really was embarrassed of all the Spider-Man stuff in there.

In college there was this girl that I liked but then I found out she had a boyfriend and gave up. I also saw her try a vape one time and I was like “What has the youth come to…” and one time, this girl and her boyfriend sat next to me, and there was this ant crawling on the girl’s desk, and she was like “Wow, nature is beautiful”, and then the guy shows up and just kills the ant, and the girl was devastated. I saw the whole thing, I didn’t move a single muscle but then the girl started yelling at this guy and I just started dying of laughter.

I’m already becoming the coolest kid on campus because one time, we had a word search puzzle and the class president (The girl who cried at the death of an ant) was like “Whoever finishes this word search first gets 20 pesos”, and I won, and then I framed those 20 pesos… Just kidding, I deposited them into a bank account right after.

I'd do anything to be in the same classroom as my old classmates, but we're all taking different classes and they go to school in the morning and I go in the afternoon, so I'm absolutely bleeding loneliness.

Chapter 3. Consoomerism.

This chapter is dedicated to most of the fanbases I've cut out from my life, the cartoons I used to watch and most of the "Phases" I've gone through. It's gonna be super short, just you watch. (Note: I still really like some of these things)

1. When I was very young, I saw this show called Kick Buttowski, I was super fucking into it, I mean, it was just so cool and so funny, and in the end, can you really blame me?
2. I recall being very into Ben 10, not so much nowadays but I remember having a lot of the toys of the various aliens and watching the show whenever I got the chance, I mean, he was a kid like me, and he's granted super awesome powers and a fairly stylish watch! Isn't that great? I loved the live action movies and I guess I kinda liked the show where he's a teenager.
3. I'm sure my family would be disappointed in me if I didn't mention the Incredible Hulk toy collection that I still have, it was my pride and joy and I loved to show it off. I was always into Hulk stories and the various cartoons and such, and I just enjoyed the fact that there's more hulk collection videos than there are Spider-Man collection videos on YouTube, I wanted to be like those cool guys. I begged my mom and dad for the coolest Hulk toys I saw on TV.
4. For a while, I wasn't really into Spider-Man or anything Marvel related because I had found this new interest called Five Nights at Freddy's. My family knew me as the FNAF guy for a while until they just started churning out games and adding more to the story, so I eventually gave up on keeping up with game news and such and just stopped… I still love collecting the Funko plushies, they're either really bad looking or perfect.
5. Remember having a pretty significant Minecraft phase and I was also super obsessed with playing the game in any way, shape or form, it was actually very negatively affecting me somehow, so I dropped it in favor of other video games. I still play Minecraft every once in a while if I get the chance.

6. I also liked most indie games that came out until I decided there were too many (Bendy's, Hello Neighbor, you know)
7. Another interest that is still sort of there is my love for Sonic The Hedgehog, I'm pretty sure I learned like all of the sonic lore before even playing a single one of the games. Nowadays, I still play the games up until the ones that came out in 2005 and I still quite enjoy collecting Sonic plushies, I don't even know where to put most of them.
8. Another similar franchise was Mario. I really enjoyed most Mario games and played the shit out of them through emulation, my 2DS and my Wii. I also have a fairly average collection and a Luigi Plush that I got right after that Health care CEO died.
9. I also had a huge Zelda phase I'd like to forget.
10. And I also really liked Clarence up until they started adding more lore to what was supposed to be a cheesy show about children being stupid for 20 minutes. I enjoyed most Cartoon Network shows like Regular Show and Adventure time up until they started adding all this romance stuff, but one show that absolutely never got boring and actually got BETTER progressively over time was the Amazing World of Gumball.
11. Some musicians I really like and listen to a lot are Weathers the band, Da Vinci's Notebook, Big Time Rush, "Weird Al" Yankovic and my current musical obsessions: The Red Hot Chili Peppers and John Frusciante. I guess I also like Green Day. I'm just not an expert on music history or which artist said or did what, unless it's an artist that I really really like and have listened to most of their discography.
12. I guess I like SpongeBob, he's pretty damn funny. Sometimes too funny.
13. I know a lot of you would be pissed if I didn't mention this at least once in the memoir because I wrote an over 12,000 word review of this but I just absolutely LOVE the Gwenpool comics, ever since I was just a little kiddy (12) and read issue 4. I vaguely recall developing a crush on her but I was probably just going insane due to the Covid pandemic… And remembering this is awkward now that she was revealed to be aro-ace but if I didn't mention this little phase, the document would've been subtitled "99.98% of the truth comes out"

14. I play this game called Doki Doki Literature Club every once in a while to piss off my brother and to piss off some of my followers that don't quite enjoy this game. Monika is my favorite doki girl.
15. Had a Channel Awesome phase and an AVGN phase, I'm proud to admit I still laugh at their shit to this day.
16. I used to watch a fuckload of streamers for a while and I used to watch their full streams. I even befriended some of them… Apologies to those who were so nice to me even though I eventually stopped watching! I still respect you all and I hope you all know that!!!
17. Pretty sure I learned most of the SonicSong182 plushie videos lore.
18. I love SuperMarioLogan and I'm not afraid to admit it.
19. This channel called RosyTheRascal15 that used to upload plushie videos until he decided it was time to stop. He still uploads and he's still just as cool as ever. Swell guy. He has the same birthday as me. His humor is unhinged.
20. The Onion News Network is pretty good, I really cackle at the headlines and the shit they say in those videos. I particularly enjoy ClickHole, which is like The Onion but turned up to a thousand with the satire.
21. Every once in a while, I would boot up Fortnite.

I think that's about it for the things I enjoyed watching and playing and reading, I actually recommend these… Even though these are things that everyone has tried at least once.

One thing I do is that if something I like is negatively affecting my life somehow, I drop it.

Hey, I said this was gonna be super short, and then it didn't turn out to be super short! I guess this is 99.98% of the truth.

Say, a special interest wasn't mentioned here! Gee, I wonder which one it could be and just how massive it could be? I mean, if I didn't mention it here it could be because 1. It's too insignificant to mention or 2. It is too massive to mention… It's the latter.

Oh, and I guess here's a list of things I want to get into and things I just could never get into:

1. DC Comics, believe me, I've tried more than once to read these things, but I can't bring myself to actually like any of them, yet I do know a little bit of Batman Lore.
2. Pokémon was one series that my sister just really loved, but I just thought it was too complicated to get into. I mean, if the cartoons were on late at night, I would either watch a full episode or just turn the TV off and go to sleep.
3. The X-Men are a franchise I just couldn't keep up with. I mean, if you held me at gun point and asked me to watch the X-Men movies in chronological order, I'd say "Sure, but bring me some popcorn, c'mon, you're threatening my life, it's the least you could do."
4. Shantae looks pretty interesting, played a bit of the GBC game and it was alright.
5. I played a few Darkstalkers games after getting into MVC and I even beat Darkstalkers 1 and 3 a few times.

Chapter 3.1. Webbed Wonders.

What, did you think I wasn't gonna mention him? C'mon, Spider-Man is everywhere for me, he's in my desk in toy form, in my profile pictures nearly everywhere, in my bed sheets, in my pillow, in my t-shirt, in my bookshelves, fucking everywhere. If you hid something Spidey related and wanted me to find it, I'd use my fuckin spider-sense to find it. Oh boy, this is gonna be the longest chapter.

As told in the first chapter, I was introduced to Spider-Man through the movie trilogy and then shortly after that, I was given a plushie and a comic book trade paperback just to make sure I was a big fan.

When I heard that a Spider-Man reboot was happening and saw Andrew Garfield in that costume, I was hyped, I think I nearly fell in love, I wanted to be like him, and after I saw the movie, I got a few toys and a Halloween costume that I wore until it became nothing but towels that I eventually threw away.

When I went to the flea market and saw a Spider-Man toy, I had to have it. I was obsessed… And I still am obsessed, and I'm proud of that because it has given me a little bit of a platform.

I believe I know nearly all of the 60 year history of the character and no matter what universe, what era, which writer or which artist, I'll be reading this comic… Doesn't mean I'll automatically like it, though.

I believe Spider-Man was the very first thing I looked up on google and I believe he was the very first thing I ever drew.

So, back in 2014, I was bored as fuck because I was on a trip with my parents and we had to stay at a hotel for about a day. The very next day was when we went to see The Amazing Spider-Man 2.

I remember the days leading up to this, I was keeping up with all the news about this movie through SevenWebHeads, I was just hyped… It was also through SevenWebHeads that I learned English cuss words.

2015-2018 was my Sonic phase, so I really didn't keep up with Spidey stuff but I'll have you know I was disappointed when I found out they got rid of Andrew Garfield as Spider-Man. Tom Holland was great, I initially missed his appearance in Spider-Man Homecoming but I did watch it eventually.

What I do remember was hearing my sister spoil Infinity War for me and then watching the movie and seeing Spider-Man die was like "Yep, I've heard this before". I had the biggest smile on my face when Endgame came out and saw Spider-Man come back… I mean, I knew he was gonna come back even before Far From Home was revealed to the public, because that is how superheroes work, they always come back.

Far From Home was okay.

I remember being super disappointed after hearing that Sony and Disney had a falling out and removed Spider-Man from the MCU, I mean, this was probably the only chance we ever had at seeing Spider-Man interacting with other heroes on the big screen, and it was taken away from us… Only for it to be resolved less than a month later.

And that is when the hype for No Way Home began. Remember that details back then were scarce and we didn't have a title, a plot synopsis, nothing. All we had was the working title of Serenity Now and the fact that Spider-Man was gonna solve his identity deal.

And then the trailer was dropped, and the leaks came out, and I was just absolutely fucking hooked, ready to watch Spider-Man stuff 24/7 for the rest of 2021.

When the movie was coming out, I was at home, stuck because I had homework to do, a shit load of homework to do or else I would fail one of my classes, and at one point I broke down crying and told my brother “Just… Go without me, I don’t deserve this movie…” Yes, that’s right, I used to be dramatic about a superhero movie. My brother was like “Well, I already bought the tickets, you’re coming with us”.

When we went to see the movie, it was just a magical experience, the best theater experience ever. I even brought my stupid ass plushie to the theater and took a few pictures… On my brother’s phone… And then he fucking deleted them, woo.

I guess stuff from 2022-2023 was pretty lackluster. Sure, Across The Spider-Verse is fine but I just can’t help but notice a lot of problems from this. I remember people watching this movie and saying it was life changing and shit, but I didn’t see it that way. It is filled with cameos and the plot felt a little rushed. Not as good as the first film.

One thing I did that year was read the first Spider-Man arc by J. Michael Straczynski and thinking it was the most gorgeous comic ever, the writing was just nothing that I had ever seen from a Spider-Man comic in the past, it takes the Spider-Man formula and absolutely improves upon it, which is something I wish I could say about recent stuff.

2024… Was 2024. I didn’t see the Venom movies, I didn’t see the Madame Web movie.

The comics were always such a great experience for me, it didn’t really matter who was writing them or who was drawing them, I always had a lot of fun seeing how Spider-Man had evolved over the years. I remember forcing my classmates to read Spider-Man comics, they never actually did it for fun except for one guy I still talk to every once in a while.

If I had to choose a favorite writer, I'd pick J. Michael Straczynski because he just knows how to write Spider-Man in a way that is so different from everyone else's work, and he uses that to convey a very powerful message that is just timeless.

My favorite artist would be tough for me to answer because when I think of Spider-Man, I think of that early John Romita Sr. artwork and even some of that Ditko art. I'm also just a huge fan of artists like Mark Buckingham and John Romita Jr. Their work is just very neat and nice to look at.

My favorite villain is Mysterio, I've always been fascinated by movie making and I've always enjoyed seeing him pop up in stories and try to cause mischief with his illusions and then Spidey finds out he's a phony. I particularly love the issue where Mysterio pretends to be a therapist and tricks Spidey into thinking he's insane.

Well, I suppose that's all I have to say about Spider-Man in this chapter. He's the greatest superhero of all time, if I can put him in something I'm making, I will… That's about it.

I guess I could talk about toys but maybe I'll save it for when I have alone time and film my collection.

I mean, when you think about it, this obsession is pretty big considering it needed to have its own subcategory.

Chapter 4. I am terminally online.

We used to have a Windows XP computer where we mostly played old Super Nintendo games and stuff… I'm not that old, we just had ancient technology. Anyway, I remember perfectly that I used to fill this thing with viruses all because I used to play emulated games, which seems to be something everybody did.

One of my earliest memories of using the internet was looking at some Hulk article or whatever the fuck and off to the side was this black and white gif of a man and a woman having sex, and I got so scared I closed the tab. That was a funny memory.

One thing I remember doing a lot was going online and playing a lot of Spider-Man and Hulk flash games, some of the ones I remember vividly were one that was like Where's Waldo but with Spider-Man, most of the motorcycle games and Spider-Man: City Raid. (WOAH BLACK BETTY!)

I remember when we discovered YouTube and we instantly used it for funny videos like Homer Simpson clips and If you Laugh you Lose videos. This was also when I started watching those "Tribute" videos where they usually play copyrighted music while a slideshow with pictures of characters play. I shit you not, I saw one guy make one of these videos in 2019!

I wasn't really a social media user back then… Or at least until I was 9 years old and discovered Google+ through one of those emails asking you to join the site.

I was in my Sonic phase during this era, and I was also in my FNAF phase, and my Mario phase, and my Bendy phase, and other phases I don't remember, and I thought that getting to interact with people that like what I like would be good for me… I mean, I don't wanna say it was terrible, because it really wasn't. I mean, I had lots of mutuals, I followed everyone back even if they had 18+ in their bio… I apparently didn't know how to fucking read.

I was 9 years old and I had broken english so I really don’t wanna see what I posted there, I don’t even know if any of my stuff was archived.

That being said, I did make lots of friends at this time, it was fun getting along with likeminded people. I remember being added to a Roleplay community, and I was only 9 so I didn’t quite know what Roleplay was so I just used it as a normal community where I spoke to the coolest people in town. I felt like a fucking king in this website, I was respected, many people called me their favorite mutual, it was like a cool little fan club.

I remember the day I got my first follower, an artist by the name of Draw Bored… I don’t know if they’re still around but if you’re out there, yo, hit me up, we should play Ultimate Custom Night some time.

I remember in the Sonic community, there was this PlushTuber kid posting his videos, and then years later, I was researching stuff for this and actually watching those videos and seeing them get tons and tons of hate in the comments… Lol.

It was around mid 2018 that I started using the website less frequently, I guess I was just really busy with life and such. It was somewhere around 2019 that Google decided to shut down google+, and I just didn’t bother enough to download my data.

After this little endeavor,I decided to go to a different but similar website that also operated on communities, a website that has never faced controversy, a peaceful place full of nice people and funny memes… That’s right, I was a redditor for a full 2 years.

And then after that I posted shit to facebook so that my family could see just how weird I actually was. And after that I felt a little burnt out on Facebook and Reddit, and I didn’t have a phone for a while, I remember that.

The first time I ever tried to make a Twitter page was around 2019 (I was 12) and remember my account getting suspended because I didn’t confirm a phone number, and I didn’t have my own phone number until like age 14, so I just gave up. And really, I made it just so I could participate in Peter Knetter’s videos when he asks his followers for pictures to draw.

I end this chapter with a funny tale. One time I had this Five Nights at Freddy's plushie inspired by the puppet character in the second game, and I wanted to show it off to the community and stuff, and I did, but then I got one comment saying something along the lines of “Hey, this game franchise is getting old, why do you guys still support this” and since this was my first ever negative comment, I didn’t even know how to take it, I was totally offended, so I decided to remove it. First of all, I probably shouldn’t have, second of all, why the fuck are you posting about how lame FNAF is getting… In the FNAF community? Luckily, I ended up handling negative comments with even more negativity.

Chapter 5. Locked.

COVID "Corona Virus" 19 or as his parents named him, SARS-CoV-2 was a disease that originated in 2019 but it didn't quite become a pandemic until like March or April of 2020 and it forced everyone to stay in lockdown for work purposes. It was a terrifying time to be alive and this disease was like chicken pox, everyone got it, some survived, some unfortunately passed away, and some didn't even get it at all. I gotta say that it ruined many things for me, it ruined my birthday, it ruined Halloween, it ruined Christmas, it was terrible.

Well, we're stuck at home for hopefully only 2 weeks, I better find stuff to do! Which is why this chapter is dedicated to everything I did in the COVID Lockdown pre-Twitter.

This was at a time when I didn't really have access to a computer for long because my mother would have to use it for her work, and I didn't think I could do much on my phone, so one night I just thought that I should make my own comic! And who do you fucking think was the main character? Who is the guy that is always in every work I make? Who is the guy that I spent an entire subcategory on just praising?

Well, this work was about Spider-Man, but with a crazy twist that no one in this world had ever seen before… A work that I made for pretty much my own amusement, a work that wasn't meant to be seen by anyone, a work that I didn't even bother showing to my family or friends, it was all mine. Yes, my friend, I'm talking about Evil Spider-Man.

It was in black and white, and I only came up with the first 2 issues before giving up on making a third one… I wasn't a very committed kid.

This wasn't my first attempt at a Spider-Man Alternate Universe, in fact, it was what the third or fourth, and keep in mind that I was 12 years old, yet drawing like a fucking 5 year old gripping a crayon with both hands instead of doing his work during preschool. I don't even remember what I did to the first issue but I remember me and my brother finding the original second issue during spring cleaning.

The first issue presented Spider-Man becoming evil after being bitten by the spider. He kills Uncle Ben, he kills Gwen Stacy, he jaywalks, all that stuff, pretty much just a pilot episode.

The second issue was originally about Spider-Man fighting the happy Hulk, and this one was actually published, just not scanned properly.

The original third issue idea never materialized but I remember exactly what it was about. This one revolved around Dr. Strange. What I don't remember is why this idea never materialized… Though, I have a few theories as to why…

The thing about me is that I lose motivation for doing tasks very easily because my family would usually see that I was doing weird shit and criticize me for it, and 1. Either my brother or mother saw that I did these issues and they just told me these were stupid, or 2. I was anxious and scared of my family members finding out about this and I just hid them somewhere… Or I guess I just really wanted something for myself and myself only.

One work that was published somewhere was a little art project where I drew the Marvel superheroes as insects or arachnids, I believe I would sketch these during class and at one point, I even drew a huge cover sketch for an assignment, and then I got an A+, and I was loved by the entire class. (Now this is 99.96% of the truth)

In a similar fashion to Evil Spider-Man was "The Weirdo Spider-Man", a Spider-Man that would spout random shit and everyone would be weirded out. Yes, this was a bit of a self insert. I think I still have these sketches saved and I did publish them in a blog post titled "My Bad Spider-Sona Ideas" or something like that, which is noteworthy because this is one of the very few blog posts that someone actually read.

There's a few Pre-Pandemic ideas I had and that I want to comment on here, the first one being that I had and still have this little notebook where I used to sketch little comic strips with my favorite characters and I think at one point I had this whole event comic where a GameBoy gets struck by lightning and Tetris pieces start falling from the sky… Not sure what superheroes were supposed to do about that, and I don't think I ever finished it.

I am a big fan of little plushies that you can put on your pocket or keys or whatever, and my 2 favorites used to be this Kirby plushie and this Yoshi plushie that came from a trade I did with a friend where I gave my pal a 2DS case and a Wii battery compartment cover and I got these 2 toys back in Elementary and I would usually film funny skits on my 2DS using them. (I'll never forget you, Cesar)

I also had a fascination with old game consoles and one time I was so bored that I took a few pieces of cardboard and some paper and made these little robot imaginary friends based on the Dreamcast, Sega Saturn and the Nintendo 64, I even gave them quirky personalities and such, I even made one of them lust for those sexy female Marvel characters. I was a weird kid.

I used YouTube a lot and I always enjoyed how the stupidest memes were the most popular ones, and they were also the ones with the least effort put into, so I did what any normal person would do and go to the Models Resource and download a Yoshi model from Mario 64, go on Paint 3D and upload the model and with the video function, I'd see Yoshi spinning… And then I uploaded that to YouTube and started gaining so many views that the servers went down (About a hundred views)

The worst part about this is that I made like a fuck ton of these videos with different characters and I even had a fucking facebook group with these videos because… I'm not sure but I eventually deleted every post. I legit thought this was gonna be the next big meme or something, I kind of had an obsession with that, I wanted popularity for a meme… Even though meme creators don't get paid if their meme becomes popular.

I believe one day I decided to look for my old Spider-Man kellytoy plushie to see if I could post it on Reddit for some epic karma, however, for the life of me, I could not figure out how to make a fucking picture post on Reddit, and I ultimately never did post it there, but I did rescue the plushie from that green toy box and eventually did put it in every profile picture I could.

For some strange reason, I decided to make a new Google account for unknown reasons and I called it Ultimate Bruh… Yes, I called it Ultimate Bruh because Ultimate Universe and Bruh Sound Effect were the 2 best things ever according to a 13 year old me.

On the night of October 27, 2020, I was talking to some friends and I asked how they managed to make a Twitter account and they told me it was a very easy process so I decided to try making an account again! And this time…

Chapter 6. Plush Hour.

…It actually worked properly, which was great. I was originally gonna name my Twitter J.E. as a way for my old Google+ mutuals to identify me but it had been so long that I just opted to go for @aSpiderManFan1. The 1 is there because aSpiderManFan was taken at the time.

Prior to this, I had changed my username to Ultimate Spider-Plush, so I had decided to call myself Spider-Plush on Twitter.

I didn't have the twitter app, instead opting to use the account through the strangest fucking method, using the browser through Gmail… I'm not sure why, but I eventually moved to my sister's laptop… Not sure why she let me use it but okay.

My first tweet ever was just "Hi.", expecting 20 thousand people to see it and like it and stuff… Turns out that's not how the algorithm works.

I remember how I got my first follower, it was my aunt. I told her I made a twitter and she followed me and that's it.

I didn't gain too many followers at first but what I did do was follow every single person with a Spider-Man or Venom profile pic, which ended up biting me in the ass later because one of them made fun of me and I didn't quite like that.

The way I gained like 3 more followers was through posting #ChannelPupIsOverParty, because I guess he had made a yucky Spider-Man Marisa Tomei joke that Twitter didn't really like. Look, I don't know if these people were serious or in on the joke but I guess we all had a few laughs.

A specific type of accounts I enjoyed following were all the daily accounts that were there, and I followed the shit out of them, and then I found out most of them were all part of this Daily Crew thing, and I did look up to them because I enjoyed the stuff they posted. I think the very first 2 Daily pages I posted were Daily Raimi Spider-Man and Daily Ultimate Spider-Man, which is weird because those were some of the only gimmick pages that never followed me back.

At one point, one of these pages, I don't know who, made this group chat with plenty of the Spider-Man pages, and they added ME to it. This was my only chance at getting to talk with these people, and talking to them I did, we started talking about Spider-Man and life and such, it was pretty crazy and incredibly fun.

Then, as a little joke, I decided to rename my account to Daily Spider-Plush so I could fit in, and I thought that it was just gonna be there for a week or something.

I remember the day after this, I woke up to see that the daily crew had gotten themselves into a bit of controversy because one of them was being transphobic, apparently. We all put out statements basically letting people know that bigotry will not be tolerated.

After having posted daily for a week, I realized… Hey, this is another chance at turning Spider-Plush into the next big meme or something, I bet I could be huge and maybe even win money! So I decided to start posting every day, which I was already doing.

I mean, it's an easy process, waking up, taking a shower, eating breakfast, brushing your teeth, tweeting something, jacking off, it was a fun process! I didn't start posting the plushies exclusively until way later and I instead chose to post literally anything. It wasn't until I started getting plush requests that I realized "Hey, this could be your chance to be a unique and original gimmick account".

Looking back, I kinda feel bad for having these gimmick page admins put up with my bullshit, I was constantly bothering them with stuff and I was kind of a naive jerk, but I don’t think they ever said anything to be nice… Or maybe that’s just my anxiety. So glad I grew up.

I wasn’t as snarky and silly and over the top as I am now, I was more chill and probably very stupid.

Let me tell ya, I would do anything for my Twitter friends, I even cried when they started fighting over things that I couldn’t even understand because I was 13. No, I wasn’t the youngest one in the group, in fact, I think a good amount of us were in our early teens.

2021 was more of the same shit, or at least it started out this way.

Well, I guess there’s no harm in mentioning the fact that I once made a movie with my plushies, and it was a huge fucking deal for me, I was super proud of this and I shared it everywhere I could. I originally wanted it to be like 2 minutes long but it ended up becoming a 7 minute long film… I remember receiving tons of praise and I even met Channel Camden through this movie, but I just felt so much cringe remembering this, so I just let it be forgotten.

I also made this stupid fucking movie inspired by RosyTheRascal15’s videos, called Spider-Plush funnies, and I thought it was so bad that I deleted every trace of it from the internet, which was an easy task since I only had like 200 followers at the time and was so obscure.

I’d like to thank all the people that supported me, and even this used br0_0m, who made some posters and got some other people to make posters for this film. I will never forget your sacrifices. This is also how I met a fellow filmmaker (upthemoata on Twitter)

One thing that happened that I thought was worthy of note was when at a family gathering, my cousins had also made twitter pages, and then our older cousins found out and they were like “You shouldn’t have Twitter, and YOU shouldn’t have twitter, and YOU, EDDIE, should also not have it” and it really made me consider deleting the account.

I remember a silly fucking anecdote that I still think about from time to time, and that was the time (April Fools Day 2021) that I brought 2 USBs full of cherished information and rare commercials, and after coming back home, I noticed that they were both infected with viruses and I had to wipe them both. Luckily most of my stuff was archived via Google Drive but I was still pissed. I also had my original profile pic and banner in there so it took me a little bit to change them back (I had changed my page to Daily BatPlush for a day)

The sequel was also supposed to be a silly project but there were tons of things pushing back the release date. I did eventually film and edit the whole thing, but I never did release it.

Things were pretty uneventful in 2021 for a long time until a certain day…

Chapter 7. A Post-6/11 Society.

This story doesn't directly involve me, but I still thought it was worth telling because this mistake keeps being repeated every once in a while.

Let me introduce you to the Daily Crew, a group of talented gimmick accounts, it was like a fucking honor to be there and have access to this account and such, it was like a secret secret club that only the true cool gimmick pages could join… Well, that's what it was supposed to be.

Here's the people involved in this amusing tale:

- Daily Marvel's Spider-Man 2017.
- Daily Miles Morales (Mat)
- Daily Marvel TAS (Dylan)
- TurdInTheWind18.
- Daily Spider-Man TNAS.
- Daily Ultimate Spider-Man.
- Daily Thanos (Abraham)
- Other daily pages were mentioned but not directly involved so that's the end of the list.
- A guy named Cal.

Just as a little note, I still sometimes communicate with these people and we still get along well, most of the time. Other times I get a mean insult but I know they don't mean it and I suppose it's justified since I am a bit of a shithead. (I don't mention the names of some of these guys because I don't know if I'd be allowed to)

As you all probably know, the 2017 cartoon Spider-Man on Disney XD is hated by literally every Spider-Man fan I know, except for Daily MSM, apparently.

So, Daily MSM was on his daily routine of praising this pile of shit and then Cal showed up to say ratio because that is just how Twitter worked back then, you said something people didn't like? Get fucking ratio'd.

Say, what’s the best way to counter-ratio someone? Say the corniest thing imaginable and tag a bunch of daily accounts. Needless to say, it didn’t work out well for anyone involved, except for Cal.

The daily pages involved were the butt of jokes for about a few days until everyone forgot. I believe this actually did cause some damage to someone who wasn’t directly involved because everyone just kept shitting on us.

From my point of view, I just didn’t feel comfortable posting for a couple weeks because I was anxious about what people would say if they knew I was one of the dailys? Everyone had already either stopped being daily and changed their name to “All Things” just so they wouldn’t be associated with this cesspool.

This wasn’t their first controversy, not even their second or third, I remember we used to fight with a specific antivaxxer and some internal drama with a guy named Daily Dethkars, was I ever involved in this? No, I knew when to keep my mouth shut and stay out of controversy.

But this dumbass controversy was the thing that ended the Daily Crew.

One day, Channel Camden approached me and asked if I wanted to film a little something for one of his upcoming videos and I agreed to do so because I already had done that Spider-Plush movie. The thing I had to do was film a Spider-Man plushie crawling a Wall and then falling, like in that one movie I really like. Another thing I was supposed to film was Iron Man staying still, but unfortunately, I didn't have a plushie of him at the time (I do now, so I only filmed the Spider-Man part. If you wanna find the video, it's still up, it's a review for Phineas and Ferb: Mission Marvel.

The rest of 2021 was fine, I guess. As time went by, people started moving away from Twitter, getting suspended randomly, forgetting their passwords or just deactivating, which made me lose a bit of contact with many friends of mine until years later.

Oh, and what happened to Daily MSM? Well, it took us like 20 attempts to get him to delete the Daily Crew tweet, and after that the guy went kinda nuts.

At this point in 2021, the Spider-Man: Lotus controversy hadn’t happened yet, so if you ever said anything negative about this fan-film, Twitter would treat you like the anti-christ. MSM apparently didn’t like how the film was turning out and decided to express that, which only made him get made fun of and after that, he disappeared. He’ll sometimes come back and retweet something, but he doesn’t say anything anymore and I like to believe he's grown but I haven't spoken to him in years.

I’d say the rest of the year went smoothly.

During the days leading up to the first anniversary of Daily Spider-Plush, a clumsy mistake led to me missing a fucking day, great. My first ever slip-up… Other than the other slip-ups.

Chapter 8. Figuring Things Out.

2022 was not very memorable, but I remember quite a few things.

So, Spider-Man: Lotus was that one fan-film that at first was looking like it was made out of love for the stories that inspired it, and it was a huge deal because this film was looking incredibly promising. Gavin J. Konop was the director, he had done things like pitch his own Spider-Man series, and it had 10 fucking seasons! Gee, this must've been great! People were congratulating him on this, everyone was praising it, however the only things available were fan-castings and trailer edits so I don't know what all the fuzz was about.

Anyway, Spidey Lotus was Gavin's only chance at actually producing something, and it was actually looking great! The trailer looked cool, the costume looked gorgeous, and it managed to get the endorsement of Jon Watts and Andrew Fucking Garfield. Wow, imagine YOU getting recognition from the director of the biggest franchise in the world and the star of some of those films? I'd be fucking thrilled! Instead, I'm a nobody that doesn't even get answers from famous people in Reddit AMAs, but one day I'll get the endorsement of the three Spider-Men.

Well, since this story is looking quite promising, let's see how everything goes to shit!

One day, I was bored, and then I heard the news. A past controversy has come back to haunt Gavin and Spidey's actor Warden Wayne… Messages are leaked showing that Gavin and Warden both were going around saying racially insensitive messages, which is NOT a good look. Did I mention that all of this was leaked by someone that was MY age?

In the light of these unfortunate events, all credibility and hope and most of the support for this project vanished. This Spider-Man film was now known as "The Racist Spider-Man by everyone, and everyone kept making fun of it.

The film eventually released and it was boring as fuck, but I guess you can tell there's a lot of care put into it, and I appreciate the work of those that aren't Gavin, Warden and that Green Goblin actor.

How does this involve me? It doesn't, but I saw it. Oh, and I guess I did reach the 1,000 follower mark somewhere around February all thanks to a stupid ass post that got over 8k likes.

Something that did involve me, though, was the fact that at one point I started missing days and I just didn't have time to go on google, look up "Spider-Man Plush" and copy and paste an image once every day was just too much effort. And I guess I just thought the joke was getting too old and I also wasn't getting much attention from people, so I just decided to quit.

I didn't do much for the 2nd anniversary.

November was pretty memorable, seeing as how it was the month when I finally started my now abandoned comic book review blog at spedermen64.wixsite.com/spiderplush. I didn't post terribly often and when I did, it was all poorly written and poorly redacted.

It was also around November that I started watching YouTube live streams about Sonic The Hedgehog and that is how I met skull902 and after that, I started watching his stuff religiously. (I had a lot of free time and was able to watch a lot of his streams most of the time) I even made friends with some of HIS friends, which I'll give shoutouts to at the end of this. I think I binged most of his videos and I still watch Spider-Man's Slightly Good Advice and Über Duck every once in a while.

Another thing I did that year was make a third account, this one being about my search for Spider-Cide, but then I eventually gave up looking for it, so I just had a shitpost account, which is weird considering that all my accounts were technically already shitpost accounts.

I got to work for Camden again, this time recording a little Spider-Man plushie beating up an Iron Man plushie, and thank God I had that Iron Man plushie. This was for his Michael Bay Transformers retrospective, and it was fun (though I didn't like the recording process, and I don't think the clip appears in the final video… but I filmed it, and I believe I'm in the description.)

I guess that's it for 2022.

Through the beginning of 2023, I had received a message from someone asking if I wanted to help them document every Spider-Man Plushie, and I was like "Okay, I don't see why not", so for 3 months, I wrote a 201 page document listing and documenting every Spider-Man plushie I could find. And then I did it again. And then I did it again. And I kept updating skull902 about it because.

It was somewhere around August that I decided to bring back Daily Spider-Plush, and it was originally for a limited time, but the end of that limited time has yet to come.

I worked for Camden on his Spider-Man trilogy videos, recording a little Spidey fighting a little Venom, and I used my comic books for backgrounds since I don't like filming around the house. I also added a little music for it.

Stuff was pretty chill for the site and for Twitter for a while, and then one day changed everything…

August 2nd, 2023, I posted a Spider-Man figure instead of a plushie and then my favorite follower replied with "Daily Spider-Figures rebrand?"

And so, my stupid ass had an idea: "Why not take the dumbass 3rd account and turn it into another gimmick? People like figures more than they do shitty plushies." And that's how Daily Spider-Figures came to be.

I've never been an action figure collector, never bothered to look into the thousands of figure brands out there, so that begs the question of why the fuck would I want to make a page about a topic I know little about?

Around that time was also when I started connecting again with my old friends from that group chat, and this guy Abraham was a huge fan of action figures, he has multiple shelves and they're all full of cool toys, and he's an expert on brands and a big critic of these figures, so I thought to have him as an admin, it just seemed like a no-brainer.

Giving your account to another person is nearly always a risk, and I didn't really trust Abraham, not because I didn't like him or anything, but because to me, he was still a stranger that I had only known via the internet, and this was at a time where we were in a server with all our other friends and it was just everyone flinging shit or shitposting, your normal Discord server stuff.

I made this rulebook full of… Rules, for admins to follow, seemed simple enough. The problem was the fact that I couldn't really bring myself to enforce these rules.

Abraham immediately started posting weird shit, unrelated shit, sometimes actual feces, and I kept deleting his stuff because it went against the rules, basically just a slap on the wrist. Couldn't bring myself to actually removing him, in fact, we did the exact opposite and just kept bringing new admins for the account.

I will admit, I was also a fucking idiot when it came to running the account, sometimes making either the wrong choices or going against Abraham's choices or just overreacting to things that weren't really so serious.

We added an admin (Which we'll be calling duck… Because that's what their user was when he was added) Duck was added because he was also an expert on figures, the problem was that he had different opinions than Abraham, and since Abraham was honestly pretty aggressive and didn't really take anything seriously at the time, this led to them fighting and arguing. A LOT.

This also happened at a time where I was also constantly arguing and fighting with my friends, it didn’t seem very significant, but it was to me because I was usually left with a pretty mean insult, or I was just told to shut up. It really hurt, I'm not gonna pretend that it didn’t, because my friends weren't like this when I first met them. Nowadays I’m able to see that this is just apparently how people joke around in the big 2020’s, even if it means threatening to jack off to someone’s profile picture. Glad that there’s no bad blood or anything between us, and I hope it stays that way.

I never wanted to make this into a big drama or anything because I kept thinking “This is insignificant, C'mon Eddie, it's a gimmick account, people are gonna make fun of you if you try to cancel them over being a little mean”.

It came to a point that this silly little page was slightly affecting my real life because I usually had to interrupt my gatherings with family or friends to see Abraham taking the account hostage. I nearly spent the last minute of New Year’s eve fighting and arguing with these guys.

There was this other account we used to run called Daily Ultimate Spider-Man, which was less of a gimmick account and more of a shitposting page where we posted the same 3 memes over and over and over. I was more of a serious admin, posting actual cool fun facts and concept art, which led to my first post kinda becoming a meme (it being the Ultimate Spider-Man 2 Concept art post).

I heard that one of the admins (Not sure which, since there were several people) was saying some very concerning sexual messages to an individual that I will not name. This was at a point in which I had already left Spider-Figures, but I was just not sure of what to do and kept blaming myself for it even though I wasn’t involved at all.

I believe the account is locked now due to an unverified phone number of all things.

Spider-Figures has over 2000 followers now, all thanks to Abraham, Duck, BluePointPurple and TurdInTheWind18, it seems people actually liked the fact that this was a page about just action figure discussion in general and they still post about getting laid every once in a while. I just decided to quit due to multiple factors: I just didn't wanna be associated with it, and I don't even know action figure stuff.

And by the way, one of my real life friends asked me about this situation. I didn't know how to explain it to him.

Who's to blame for all the wrongdoings of the account? Well, thinking about it now, nobody AND everybody at the same time. I was just too sensitive and didn't really know what to say or do most of the time back then, Abraham just wanted to have a little fun, and the other admins just wanted to be part of a fun gimmick page to talk about their toys.

I'm now on good terms with everyone that was involved in this, and I like to believe we've all grown past this, Abraham isn't the way he was back then, TurdInTheWind is listening to the 41 year old rapper, BluePoint is… Not sure, but a huge shoutout to him, and Duck is hopefully doing well.

It was also around this time that I tried to make a separate Daily Sonic Plushies page so I could post Sonic plushies… No shit. I always forgot to post so I eventually left the account to Jimiroo The Alien for HIM to forget to post.

I believe I worked for Camden again, this time filming a bunch of Spider-Man figures attacking a tiny Spidey. This was for the Across The Spider-Verse review but I have very little Miles Morales merchandise, so I reused little Spidey from the Spider-Man Trilogy Recap video for the clip.

(Oh yeah, 2023 was when Murder of Sonic The Hedgehog came out, and Barry The Quokka made their epic debut, and then they actually became my actual favorite character in the series. God bless the r/BarryTheQuokka subreddit and the Discord server.)

Chapter 9. Brand New Day.

January of 2024 was when I made a tough decision of just not tweeting for a while… Looking back, I could've just scheduled stuff but this was at a time when I just tweeted manually. This break was done because I just wasn't feeling that great myself.

I also started using the wix site more often, but after realizing that Wix doesn't show your site on Google search unless you pay up, I moved to Blogger, which is owned by Google but it had the same problem, so at that point I was just talking to a wall, so I better just make YouTube videos at this point.

I also had to figure out how to change colors on photoshop before April Fools before my epic Web-Man joke.

This was the year when I reached 2,000 followers and I was hoping to reach 3k this year but by the time that happens, I'll probably be fucking dead.

Gosh, what else happened that year… I guess it was kinda the start of a new era, a Brand New Day, if you will.

Got my brother to draw a sick image of a Spider-Man plushie for the 4th anniversary specials, which is way more effort than what went into this year, come on, Eddie, STEP IT THE FUCK UP.

I'd say it was a pretty big year for me, but we weren't getting a lot of good Spider-Man stuff so it was a fairly average year for me.

I guess it wasn't a pretty eventful year, so why it has its own chapter is beyond me…

Oh, yeah, that's also the year I made my Bluesky page and my Tumblr page…

My bluesky wasn’t meant to be a gimmick or even a Twitter replacement, I just did it to keep communicating with my friends that moved to the site and never came back to Twitter. I guess I stopped using it after a while and just gave the account to an anonymous friend for HIM to post random shit, but I think he just abandoned it and gave it back to me.

I had a Tumblr that was also not meant to be a replacement for Twitter, but a contingency plan in case Twitter removes the schedule function or in case something happens that forces me to stop tweeting. I did try to post daily on there too but I didn’t get enough attention so I eventually just stopped. On October 27th, 2024, I made the dailyspiderplush blog and started posting there too, and it was actually pretty successful this time. I get asked for autographs all the time, people ask me to post their Spider-Plushies, I reblog some beautiful art, and I think I’m at 200 followers now, thanks guys!

Wait, why is this the “Dark times upon us” chapter if there isn’t anything dark?

I guess things were kinda falling apart when the US elections took place and I lost a bet so I had to post weekly. It didn't last more than 3 weeks but it was tough.

I also filmed Spidey dancing for what I believe was a Camden review about Ben 10… I remember I had a Mountain Dew bottle and I decided to film it rolling on the floor because it was funny. (No music, though…)

Christmas and New Years were somehow more depressing than 2020 due to the fact that we had to cancel our family gathering due to us getting really really sick.

Chapter 10. Eddium Arcadium.

It’s not 2007, it’s not 2020, it’s 2025. This is the year that I think is the best year for Spider-Plush.

The thing I was doing from late 2024 to early 2025 was sending this dumbass Spider-Plush picture to random people, which became a problem because I had sent this to over 100 people. If you were a victim of this stupid silly picture, I deeply apologize but be grateful it wasn’t a dick pic.

I had filmed 2 Spider-Man plushies hitting each other with pencils for Camden's CW Flash video, which was easier than. I thought it was gonna be (I dare you all to try filming 2 plushies beating each other up with no tripod or assistance)

January and February were uneventful but March was when I made a tough decision of taking another break for school and personal reasons, I don’t remember anything productive that I did during the break so in the end, was it really necessary or did I just need to leave you guys for 2 weeks without a plushie to look at? You decide.

April was when I was hacked by Daily Web-Plush and then my team took him to the beautiful forests of Tijuana and eradicated him. A funeral was held 2 days later and his ashes were spread in a toilet in LA. I also turned 18 years old, which was like turning 17… But add one.

Late May-Early June was when I had to take another break due to the fact that my college admission exams were coming soon, and I had to study HARDER.

When I came back, things really started to look up for me, and I had enough money for goods and services. I was accepted into college but the enrolling process was just hell mostly but we made it through.

And then I graduated from High School, and then I went to college but everything was fine for Daily Spider-Plush. And I also got my copy of Gwenpool #1.

I made a pretty ballsy decision, for the 5th anniversary of Spider-Plush, and that was getting another admin. So, I made a form detailing the requirements for being an admin for only a month, and the winners were KlonoaPrime and Bobo (snakes4pool) on Twitter and Tumblr respectively, and they did such a wonderful job and I might consider bringing them back some time next year. Other admins that were considered were Abraham, Polly (Guest writer on the website) and Adam Wade of SpiderMan_Newz.

I also worked on another Camden clip (for the Fantastic Four review), filming Spidey with a bag over his head, and Ai kept that bag as a memory.

We also had new guest writers on the site, which makes me feel bad because I'm officially retired, so the site is basically theirs now… Anyway, I really appreciate the good work of StarlightRLD on Twitch, Polly on YouTube and Channel Camden on YouTube.

One thing I did last year that I also did this year was 27 days of Spider-Plush, which is when I post the most iconic Spider-Man plushies, basically a Spider-Plush-Tober.

I'd call July and August the "Spider-Plush depression" due to the fact that posts weren't really getting much attention and I just felt like I was being forgotten at times, and only repeating the same 3 jokes over and over, and posting off-gimmick most of the time, so at one point I decided that I was just gonna move off-topic posts to my main account and post more serious captions on DSP- Wait a second… That abbreviation might be mistaken for something else…

If I look at where I was in 2020 and where I am now with Daily Spider-Plush, I'd say I'm doing great, I have more online friends than anyone could ever ask for, I have a fairly average fanbase that supports what I do and my mom thinks I’m an influencer. I even became more comfortable with my real life friends knowing about this gig.

Why do I do this Daily Spider-Plush deal? Why do I post about baby toys on the daily? For years I kept making up this bullshit reason about “Doing it because no one else would”, but really, I just enjoy the response I get when I post some plushies, I get comments like “I need this”, or “I used to have this one lol”, and “I want to eat it”, and I enjoy how Spider-Plushies unlock joy and memories in people, it means a lot to me.

Chapter 10.1: How I fell in love with Sue Storm

Really Eddie? You're gonna write this shit? After the cheerful note that ended the last chapter? Okay, you're the boss.

Ever since I joined the site, I always saw everyone being publicly horny for fictional characters, I used to just ignore that, and then after a while, I just started making fun of those people, I was the anti gooner, and I was proud of it, dammit.

Then one day, I couldn't take it anymore, I HAD to make one of these lustful tweets, and I thought it'd be funny if I used the fucking gimmick page for it. On January 7th, 2025, I tweeted about how much I needed Sue Storm.

For those who don't know, Sue Storm, aka "The Invisible Woman" had a new design for this game called Marvel Rivals, and my little heart thought she was so beautiful, and my knees went weak.

This public lust felt… Good? I guess I thought it was kinda funny seeing this gimmick page dedicated to posting plushies start lusting after a fictional character after 4 years of being completely against that.

Then I ran the joke into the fucking ground, I retweeted softcore porn featuring Sue, started joking about it over and over and over again, no one ever told me that it got annoying, but I knew they thought it was annoying.

This silly joke crush became actual lust for her, it was like an addiction, I kept saying "I'll tone it down with the Sue Storm posts, everyone" and I just kept doing it over and over again.

As of now, it seems like my lust for her is just one of those bygone eras that everyone can look back on and think "That motherfucker Eddie was weird as hell".

Chapter 11. Interviews

I would've felt pretty bad if I had only gotten this information through myself, so I decided to ask StarlightRLD, Polly, Camden, Abraham, Andres, Sebastian, KlonoaPrime, Bobo and Water for their input and waste their time with a little interview. Also, a few words from people who I forced to say a little something.

Some of these interviews may be altered for fixing grammar or for the sake of length, but they’re mostly unaltered.

(These are presented in order of when I got the responses.)

11.1. Polly.

Polly’s been a really chill person that just knows the ins and outs of reviewing and that’s why I thought he’d be a perfect pick for the now abandoned review site.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: “Hey-o, I'm Polo! Or Polly, I don't have much of a preference. I am a 16 year old streamer who is absolutely taking over the internet.”

Q: Say, do you remember how we met?

A: “Like a lot of people I've met throughout my Twitter career, uh, I do not remember how we've met. It all just kinda happened, I presume I saw the Daily Spider-Plush account and followed it since, I am, in fact, interested in Spider-Man and you just followed me back for some unknown reason. I do have some crazy lore to drop: I had a Twitter account in 2020, pre-swool era, and you follow it. I won't say it was because I hate how I acted but I just wanted you to know…”

Q: What made you decide to become friends with a sociopath like me?

A: “It just kinda happened. Really like the way you write and talk from your hilarious and or high quality #xeets and you have something to do with Spider-Man, I think, so I figured we could talk and shit. Wow.”

Q: Tell us how you managed to become one of our many guest writers

A: “You came up to me, expressing how you'd like to have me as a blog writer on your… Blog and I thought it would be fun since I do like to write. It took me forever to actually publish something because I kept not working on my topic so I thought it would be wise to just choose a different topic and I got it done.”

Q: Just out of curiosity, why do you love Web-Man so much?

A: “I legitimately think Web-Man has a lot of potential as a character and he's fun, and shit. Very hot and sexy.”

Q: How do you get your sense of humor?

A: “Your humor evolves and changes as you hang around other people. Like, you'll pick up on some of the shit they do if you find it funny or whatever. So, I'd say watching and talking to people gave me whatever the fuck I find funny. Some people will say that there are many times they disagree with my humor admittedly... They just don't get the appeal of Hawk Tuah, Pomni Porn, X Grok Ai and 927 jokes.”

Q: What’s a positive thing that you think about often?

A: “God, I don't even know.”

Q: Is there anything you’d like to promote or say to the reader?

A: “Subscribe to my YouTube channel on YouTube, Polo Swoolish, and or follow me on Xwitter, PoloIsSwoolish!!”

11.2. Camden.

Camden’s been just a great guy to talk to and late at night, I like to put up a projector in my bedroom and watch his videos in black and white to pretend I’m watching a fun film reel from the 1960’s… Or I could just check out his content on my phone!

He’s very supportive and very open to collaborative work, so I suggest you check out his stuff.

Q: Introduce yourself

A: “Hello there! My name is Camden and I host a YouTube channel named "Channel Camden" where I review TV shows and movies, talk about many topics relating to pop culture, make editorials, voice-overs with friends, retrospectives, gameplays, and more!”

Q: Do you remember how we met and how we became friends?

A: “I remember when I saw a post about a "Spider-Man Plush Movie" and I was intrigued. I then watched it and told the creator, Spider-Plush, that I loved it and then we started interacting a lot and started doing multiple collabs. He showed up on my channel, I showed up on his, I wrote an issue for his comic "Evil Spider-Man", and I write on the blog page.”

Q: How did you become one of our guest writers on the site?

A: “Spider-Plush asked if I could write an article about the 2000s Ultimate Spider-Man comic series on the blog page and I did since I thought it would be fun! Afterwards, we talked a bit about the blog site and asked if I could write more articles and become a member, and I immediately said yes.”

Q: How did you get the idea of starting your YouTube series?

A: “It was one day when I was 13, I had nothing else to do so I decided to review X-Men Origins: Wolverine, since the movie was on my mind at the time and I did do YouTube once before (hosting a Sonic Plush series for a brief bit). I uploaded the video and I thought that I should make it a series. I constantly came up with ideas for videos and the activity occupied me during Covid.”

Q: Which one of your videos is your favorite?

A: “I have a few favorites but I loved the Ben 10 retrospective, the entire Misadventures of Batman voiceover series, and the Bayformers retrospective since it changed my channel and myself forever.”

Q: What’s a positive thing that you think about often?

A: “I like to think about the many possibilities destiny can have in store for me, my next big experience, and moments that I cherish with friends and family.”

Q: Is there anything you’d like to promote or say to the readers?

A: “To all the readers, always remember to have fun, live life, smile, and go check out The Super Hero Squad Show.”

11.3. Water.

Water is someone that goes by many names, names like “Destiny”, “Tylah”, but I’m gonna be using the one she was using when I had first met her, and that is Water.

A very interesting case because I can’t always tell when she’s joking around or if she’s absolutely serious, but she makes me laugh either way.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: “My name is tylah, I'm 16 and I think atsv and itsv is the only good media that spider man produced”

Q: Do you remember how we met?

A: “i think i met you through duck when you were still on spider man figures and i met duck because he was on hidden replies checkers”

Q: What made you decide to become friends with a weirdo like me?

A: “eddie i dont think you are a weirdo i actually think you are pretty cool”

(Note: That’s actually a really nice response)

Q: What made you decide to become a hater for me and my page?

A: “i hate you eddie and you suck”

(Note: Nevermind.)

Q: I’m drawn a blank here… Do you think interviewers should stop asking stupid questions and wasting people’s time?

A: “i love useless interviews i actually don't care about serious questions”

Q: What’s a positive thing that you think about often?

A: "I like to think about school and being done with it”

11.4. Abraham.

Abraham is one of my very first online friendships, formerly known as Daily Thanos, and then Daily Guardians of the Galaxy, and I think he was a Daily Ghost Rider account, but I could be misremembering. I remember being pretty sad seeing his accounts get suspended back when Jack was running Twitter instead of Elon. We've had our differences in the past but this time I AM moving on, I promise! I just struggle a little.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: "Abraham! 18! Collecting! Games! Gym!"

Q: Do you remember how we met?

A: "The daily crew." (See chapter 6)

Q: Do you remember how we became friends? What made you decide to befriend some schmuck like me?

A: "I don't remember, I think the spider-plush movie." (See Chapter 6)

Q: Mind telling the readers about the Thanos Plush movie?

A: "I never filmed it or anything. The trailer wasn't made with actual scenes from the movie, the scenes in the trailer were made for it. It woulda been so peak"

Q: What's something positive that you think about often?

A: "Hmm nothing positive at this moment. It's hard to think about something positive. But my friends I'd say. And my family ofc."

Q: Is there anything you would like to promote or tell the reader?

A: "Yeah follow Spider-Figures the GOATTTT"

11.5. Starlight

The Starlight System, another friend that I met through the same methods as Abraham, and we didn't talk very often back then, or at least until we met again recently and I started learning more about her and she learned more about me.

She's a troubled person but despite that she's a very nice friend and definitely supportive.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: "Hi! My name is Rose Lynn Darling, and my online handle on most places is StarlightRLD! I'm also known on Twitter as "MaydayPosting/Earth-_982"! I'm 22 years old supposedly, and I've been interested in comic books and videogames since I was a kid! I'm very lucky to be able to turn those interests into my hobbies, whether it be reviewing comics and introducing marvel fans to the character over on twitter, or playing games and having fun with my friends on YouTube and Twitch!"

Q: Do you remember how we met? I mean, I know how but I wanna see if you know.

A: "I believe we met on twitter in the latter part of 2020, as "The Daily Crew" was reaching its original breaking point. Since then, we barely kept in contact, but somehow you found my discord, and randomly sent me a picture of a plushie venom. Now we're good friends. Some stuff may have happened in the middle of all of that. Up to reader interpretation."

(NOTE: First of all, it was SHE who found my Discord, second of all… Nothing, I don't know why I said first of all)

Q: Why are you friends with a weirdo like me?

A: "Venom plushie. No but seriously, I should be asking you that! Why are you friends with me? You do stuff often on the internet, I go missing in real life for various periods of time!”

Q: Tell us how you became one of our blog writers?

A: “I've wanted to review each issue of Spider-Girl for a very long time, but didn't have the time or energy to make a blog myself. Plus, I like being part of a team that readers can get unique perspectives from!”

Q: What’s something positive that you like thinking about often?

A: “This is gonna sound corny, but I really do like thinking about my friendships often. With my memory and other mental issues, I have a hard time recalling the past, which is why I like recording all of my streams, looking back on Discord chats, and scrolling through the history of my friends and I's social media pages.”

(Note: That’s not corny at all, in fact, I also scroll through my interactions often)

Q: Is there anything you’d like to promote or say to the reader?

A: “I've technically done enough promoting as it is, but one thing I'd like to say to the reader, is that no matter what, if you have an idea that keeps coming back to you, as long as it's safe and doesn't hurt anyone, including yourself, there's a reason it keeps coming backs. So keep trying, because it matters. And keep fighting, because you matter. Always. Remember to be good people, too.”

11.6. KlonoaPrime.

KlonoaPrime is a bit of a mystery for me because he always finds all these cool commercials and images and magazine articles about various franchises and I wanna learn how to do that too, but unfortunately I'm too lazy to figure it out so I leave all the lost media searches to him.

I think he was a pretty good pick for an admin on Daily Spider-Plush due to his insane knowledge of plushies that are either bootleg or official.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: "Wsg, my name is KlonoaPrime, age 20. I ofc love Klonoa and Spider-Man amongst other stuff like Kamen Rider and Ultraman. I love to draw, collect figures, and research obscure media."

Q: Do you remember how we first met?

A: "We first met when you commented on one of my videos in 2021 because you remembered seeing me on instagram when I was Spidermanarchives."

Q: Why are you friends with a schmuck like me?

A: "Honestly it was our shared interests, the fact you remembered me from all the way then, and because you were pretty cool ngl."

(Note: That's certainly flattering)

Q: How did you become an admin for Daily Spider-Plush?

A: "I wanted to because it sounded fun, I did have knowledge on some plush facts and I have a fondness for Spidey merch."

Q: How did you become an archivist for all things Spider-Man, Klonoa, Sonic, etc.?

A: “Basically it was for clout at first when it came to Spidey, then when I started to actually uncover more and more lost stuff, it became pretty fun for me.”

Q: What’s something positive that you think about often?

A: “I like to sit back and daydream about ideas I have for certain stories and characters, ones that I created and ones that I discovered over the years.”

Q: Would you like to say anything to the reader or promote anything?

A: “Stay in school, don’t smoke, keep being curious.
YT: KlonoaPrime
X: @KlonoaPrime
Insta: @KlonoaPrime
Gimmick X: @spidermerch”

11.7. Snake.

Snake, an individual that I met quite recently via Tumblr, but they've already left an impact on Daily Spider-Plush history, which meant that they HAD to be here.

Q: Introduce yourself.

A: "My name is Snake!!! @snakes4pool on Tumblr and other stuff, I love Spider-Man (obviously) and Deadpool! Comic books and Superheroes are my passion and my dream job is to be a comic book artist. I'm currently taking a break from college and focusing on my comic portfolio and working :3 but for school I'm studying ecology, linguistics, and arts!!!"

Q: Remember how we first met?

A: "I followed the Daily Spider-Plush tumblr a while ago, probably like a year ago now, time has been going so fast... I dmed you (Eddie) about a Spider-Man cat toy my cat Spider had in November 2024 and the rest is history (heheh)"

Q: Why are you friends with a sucker like me?

A: "Okay guys so news flash!!! Eddie is super awesome and cool. The Dailyspiderplush descriptions were funny and I loved your (Eddie) personality in them. Once I saw the mod application I was like oh heck yes, I need to be a part of this and know this guy."

Q: How did you become an admin for Daily Spider-Plush?

A: "I mean obviously DailySpiderPlush is the best blog to be an admin for, it's freaking Spider-Man and Plushies!! What more could you want??? But seriously, I really enjoyed seeing the plushies everyday, it made me feel happy even on bad days! I also had a bunch of ideas heehee.."

Q: How did you become a fan of Spider-Man and Deadpool?

A: “My older brother really introduced me to comics, though I'd been interested in marvel since I was very young because my Dad loved marvel movies, like blade and the early xmen movies. It became a whole family thing to go watch marvel movies on premiere night everytime one came out!! Spider-Man has always been my favorite and he overtime became my Special Interest, I didn't get into deadpool comics til a few years ago (I say a few but its been like 5 years!!) and when I bought and read all of the slash comics I just fell in love with Spideypool even more than I had already been and now I'm stuck with them forever TT <3”

Q: What’s something positive that you like thinking about?

A: “My cat Spider... She's so silly and evil, my gorgeous angel stinkabutt baby. I love her with my whole heart 😭 and yes I named her Spider because I love Spider-Man. Also she's a black cat.”

Q: Would you like to promote or say anything to the reader?

A: “#readcomics even if you don't know where to start, just pick one up and read!!! or do it online, comics changed my life and its an amazing medium :3 Also, follow me! I'm on Ko-Fi, Pinterest, Tumblr, Ao3, and Bluesky as Snakes4pool!!”

Chapter 12. Some other funny stories.

I guess this chapter is one of those where I just couldn't find a way to fit into other chapters. These are not presented in any order.

Very early on, I didn't really like going outside much, and one time, my family was going to the park. I don't even know why I wanted to stay home, I guess I just really liked my toys. Well, my family forced me to go with them, and we were about to catch a taxicab when 2 (or I think just 1) beautiful ladies showed up and somehow they were the ones that managed to convince me to go to the park.

One movie that always made me and my brother laugh every fucking time was Flushed Away, it was just so fucking funny, and when we found out it was on Netflix, we watched it like 5 times every day, it was incredible, I'm pretty sure at one point we were able to quote the entire movie flawlessly. Other movies that made us laugh were Over The Hedge, Grown Ups 1 and 2, and I think that's about it.

One time I saw a kid get reported to the principal all because of some bullshit Charlie Charlie game (The game about the ghosts that move pencils). And nowadays, there is a Charlie that recently turned into a fucking ghost, so it's time to bring back this game.

Admission exams are things that always scared me, but it didn't matter because I always got accepted. (My family says I failed my Kindergarten admission exam but that is because they're fools and wanna bring me down).

During Junior High, there was this weird kid that was drinking lemonade one time, and I tried to be funny and said "Man, fuck lemonade." and then this kid went berserk and started throwing desks and shit and chasing after me. Oh, and then one time, this kid hated me so much he pretended I was a fucking ghost, and then he smacked himself in the head with a pencil case and pretended that never happened. He was the weird kid in the classroom but then he left town and now I was the only weird motherfucker in that class.

When I got chickenpox, I was miserable. I wasn’t able to go to school, everything itched, and I just couldn’t scratch myself, and I hated it, and I was really looking forward to going back to school. I remember thinking “Wow, everyone’s gonna talk about how much they missed me and how glad they are that I’m finally back”... But then all that fell apart when I actually did come back and no one even said anything to me for the entire day.

One time I was in a VC with a bunch of friends that are YouTubers and one of them leaves for a second and we all watch his stream, but he couldn’t look at the chat, and when he comes back, someone says "You didn't miss much, just Eddie being a dumbass, as usual". And I heard everything. I like to think what he said was in good fun… I hope.

One time I had a dream where my dumbass Twitter was hacked, but the hacker just posted the same shit I was already posting, so what gives?

One time I followed my buddy Sebastian on Twitter and the next day, at school, during class, he just randomly mentioned stuff I posted… While the teacher was teaching, mind you.

The saddest moment of my pathetic weasel-faced dog boy life was when I was playing through Sonic Adventure 2's chao garden. I noticed that my Chao (aka my children) wouldn't stop crying, so I took them to the doctor and my heart sank when I read "Looks like this Chao hates you"

Funny story, I was watching the Garfield movie in theaters once and while I was trying to peacefully watch the movie, some child just kept throwing around his Garfield toy at me, it was the funniest shit ever.

I suppose I'll add more stuff when I make an updated version, but for now that's it. On with the Evil Spidey BTS stories.

12.1. Evil Spider-Man Recap.

Seeing how I had become a little popular with the whole Spider-Plush thing, I decided to dig up that Evil Spider-Man idea and maybe even remake an issue or two.

Issue 1 was pretty much a remake of how I first wrote and drew that first issue when I was 12, and a pretty basic formula for the series, Spidey's origin and his iconic moments, but he's evil. Pretty basic stuff but I absolutely hate the cover I made for it.

Issue 2 is a funny story because the copy I published was the actual original copy I made when I was 12. Evil Spidey meets a Hulk and kills him. Hulk is actually happy in this universe, which only makes Spidey more evil when he decides to kill him. I also decided to give Spidey a new suit… 2 issues in, mind you.

Up until now, I had absolutely no idea as to what I could've done for the third issue, and I wasn't very creative because sometimes you have so many ideas that you never end up executing them.

Issue 3 is just scrapping the suit. I don't think a lot happened in it. The reason I scrapped the suit thing is because 1, it looked bad, and 2, I like the classic suit.

Issue 4 is the only one with a variant cover inspired by that one cover I don't remember (but I know it was made by Ron Frenz) and this is the issue where I introduce Wolverine, and I wanted to make all characters different from 616, so I made Wolverine mortal.

Issue 5 is where he fights Shocker, who was always a favorite of mine. It is also where I introduced Evil Spider-Man extra.

I wanted to introduce some original villains… Or I suppose antagonists to the series, and one of the ideas was this alien man from outer space, and when Spidey kills him, he turns into the symbiote. Other original ideas I had that didn't come into fruition were things like an AI named 155 that Spidey made, a sexy female villain that I scrapped because I can't draw hair or curves, a rockstar character and that's about it.

Issue 7 introduces Iron Man, a version that is willing to kill, and Evil Spider-Man certainly dies, but he's brought back to life near the end of the issue.

Issue 8 is when Spider-Man kills Iron Man and finally takes off the symbiote costume.

Issue 9 is a bit of a filler issue, seeing as Spider-Man meets Daredevil, who is also evil, so Spider-Man thinks it's weird since there's only supposed to be one evil character in this book, but he doesn't kill him… Yet.

Issue 10 was the first time I fucked up because my family saw it and criticized me for it. And I wasn't happy with how Venom looked so I just made it again. I believe I still have the old version somewhere. I also remember ending it very abruptly due to lack of ideas… Venom in this universe is just a chill man. I tried to make him goofy like Patrick Star and maybe if I continue the series, I will try.

Issue 11 is the last traditionally drawn issue and it is basically the start of a storyline that never went anywhere, and Spidey was supposed to find things to do while stuck inside for rainy days, so he hacks Mary Jane's Twitter account and disses Batman.

Issue 12 is not only the first issue drawn on MS Paint, but also the first one in color, and I really hated coloring, so I got rid of it later on. The reason why I decided to go digital is because I ran out of paper. Kai PSM read this one on one of his live streams, so I gave him a shoutout a few issues later, his reaction was "What is going on?"

Issue 13 is when Spider-Man finally faces Daredevil, and just like all his foes, he dies. Not much happened.

I also made the Evil Spider-Man movie trilogy, which were supposed to be canon until I decided that this will be like my own little Marvel multiverse.

14 was the one where I really really ran out of ideas, so I decided to make a crossover with the Spider-Plush movies that I never made and this issue was my way of teasing it by putting the Hulk from that universe.

Issue 15 was the issue where Spidey meets Spider-Plush, and they fight, and I don't remember who wins, I think they both go their separate ways. This is where the series goes back to being in black and white. The extra issue is a little parody of the Ultimate Universe, and the first and probably only appearance of Miles Morales in this universe… If he was in the series more often, I wouldn't make him evil.

The next storyline is one I'm kinda proud of, and I knew exactly how I came up with this one. I was watching 67 Spider-Man and I saw the episode about the 5th dimension, and I got the idea of having Spider-Man go through the 5 dimensions.

Issue 16 is about the 1st dimension, which is just the regular world. Spidey goes to dinner with Venom and then goes to investigate the multiverse or something, and he falls through a window and makes it to the next dimension.

Issue 17 is the Christmas special, which is just an uneventful Christmas Carol, but we see Evil Spider-Man 2099. Due to a lack of ideas, I decided to keep Evil Spidey's past a secret.

Issue 18 is where the Dimensions storyline continues, in the second dimension, where gravity is fine except for newcomers. I'd like to thank Polly Swool for letting me use his character for a little background gag.

Issue 19 is when I ran out of ideas for how to stretch these dimensions into an entire issue, so I broke out Paint 3D for a few pages, not much happened, and the 4th dimension was deleted at one point due to a reason I was gonna explain in a future issue that never materialized.

The big ending is issue 20, which is when Eviler Spider-Man shows up, and this was a clear nod to the Doppelganger from 616, but he's actually really chill and awesome.

I thought I'd make this whole arc where I got other writers for the series, which only ended up in one issue scripted by Channel Camden and drawn by ME. Spidey goes to the universe where Camden's "How They Pitched" series takes place, and then Spidey fights Wolverine and they both die in an explosion. (But Spidey lives).

And that is where the series ends. 22 was supposed to be scripted by my pal Ian and drawn by my pal John but I never got anything to post, but it's fine… Oh shit, I do have a script… Maybe I'll do something with it…

Future plans like the previously mentioned 155 might be done if I decide to continue the series. One thing I've always struggled with was the schedule, it went from a daily series, to a weekly series, to monthly, to every once in a while… And I haven't made one in over a year…

Canceled issues were supposed to be:

- Spider-Man: Blue parody (done prior to actually reading Spidey Blues…)
- Spidey Super Stories parody…
- Venom Spin-off book
- Evil Spidey XXX by Axel Brau- I'm just kidding.

Evil Spider-Man issues were formatted the way they were because since this was pretty much the anti-comic book, I turned letter size paper sideways. It was also poorly drawn on purpose because it's like supposed to counter the official comic books, which were usually drawn by very talented artists.

12.2. The deranged ramblings of an insane man.

I guess I can't ignore the website forever, so here's an explanation for my greatest hits over at inthemindofspiderplush.blogspot.com

This isn't a full behind the scenes story on EVERY post but if you ever wanna ask me for my thoughts on a post I made, let me know via any of my contacts.

My first ever post was written due to the fact that I was pissed about the fact that the only mentions of Mexican La Prensa Spidey I found were the ones that mention "OMG SPIDEY MARRIES GWEN STACY HOLY SHIT SHIT HOLY", so I reviewed an entire issue before noticing that the fucking story was stolen from an issue of Daredevil.

The Spider-Plush Random Hour is supposed to be a mix of everything on the site for one post, and it sorta was that. Random Hour 2 was about…

I also remember quite enjoying the writing process for the anniversary specials for years 3 and 4 and I thought I was gonna write a big post for the 5th one… But then I made this instead.

My review style went from being super short and simple, to being very detailed and showing too many images from the comic books I was reviewing, but then I settled for Linkara style reviews where I look at the cover and talk about the story while making fun of it.

Update posts were not very frequent, and I tried to make like 3 series about only updates, first was Spider-Plush Tales (with no tales), then Spider-Plush Hype, and then it was just commenting on real news, spidey news and site updates.

Spanish is my first language (I really should make a spanish translation for this…) but the only Spanish review I've ever written was for the My Hero Academia movie, that I saw with my friends for a fun trip, and while the trip was fun, I did tell them "I'm gonna review this, and I'm gonna be harsh" and I did. I was also beat up for not liking the movie but we all moved on past this.

Gwenpool Strikes Back… Oh boy… This series was really really bad but at the same time, it had some really interesting stuff, and since I love Gwenpool (in a "I'm a big fan" kinda way), I might as well express how unhappy I was with it… Oh boy, little did I know that things could get worse.

A series I was meaning to read for a while was the 2018 Unstoppable Wasp series by Jeremy Whitley, and I was certainly not disappointed, I had plenty of fun writing it and I'll certainly do it again.

12 Days of Eddiemas was the Christmas special I did for 2024, and it was actually fun even though it stressed me out a little bit.

A series that I was quite proud of was the JMS Spider-Man retrospective (which was unfinished) because 1. It was a Spider-Man run that I really enjoyed and I had tons of fun writing jokes for it, and praising the books, so that was fun… And 2. It was my first time reading the run, and it was like finding a gold mine…

The post I wrote while angry was the one where I debunked Barrolin, a ship between Barry The Quokka and Lanolin the Sheep, from Sonic.

The post I wrote while horny and angry was the one where I debunked the ship between Spider-Man and Morrigan Aensland.

The post I wrote while really hungry was the Cool World review, which doubled as a review for DOTS candy. It was a part of this stupid ass idea where I took a comic or a movie or a game and some snack and I reviewed both of those things.

4 Random Issues was a series where I took a random Marvel Character and reviewed 4 issues about them… I didn't try hard enough because the X-Men one, the Avengers one and the Spider-Man ones were left in the gutter. I did have this idea of reviewing 4 random Spidey issues from every decade, and it was gonna be so fun.

The Doki Doki Literature Club reviews were written while I was playing the game, it is the only review I've written with 2 monitors, and it was the most fun ever because I got to say the most out of line shit.

The biggest and my absolute favorite post on the website was the one where I reviewed nearly every issue of Gwenpool, because it was a big deal for me. I even wrote an entire behind the scenes post about it, which you can read over here: https://inthemindofspiderplush.blogspot.com/2025/06/the-making-of-eddies-guide-to-gwenpool.html

The thing about the Gwenpool post is that it was originally gonna be a birthday post detailing my favorite comic books of all time, but then the birthday post idea turned into Random Hour 3. I also hate that Linkara has reviewed Gwenpool because I know he's just gonna make fun of it, and it won't be like MY review, which was also just making fun of the series.

An idea that I liked for the JMS retrospective was looking back at a relevant issue of ASM before looking at a similar JMS storyline. I did one for ASM 121, ASM Annual 3, and I was gonna do one for Neogenic Nightmare but that was when I decided to retire abruptly.

My guest writers were always making the best posts on the site.

Camden wrote reviews for Ultimate Spider-Man and Amazing Spider-Man #500, Polly wrote one for the Spider-Man Fortnite skin, and Starlight wrote a little intro to the MC2 universe, and those were posts that legitimately made me cry of joy.

I wrote a post about Spider-Man (2002) and I was gonna review the entire movie series, but I RETIRED.

The most recent post listed there is the 9/11 one. Lol.

Had this idea for what each writer on the site was gonna do (Spider-Man-wise)… I was gonna review the old hag ASM series, Camden was the fresh new young writer (even though he's older than me) and he was gonna review Ultimate Spidey and books aimed at new readers, Starlight was gonna review Spider-Girl because she's a girl, and Polly was gonna review video games and TV shows…

People that were considered for the site:

- Dreaded (Writer for Destiny Productions)
- Adamwade of Spider-Man_Newz
- That's it.

Oh yeah, that's right, I also interviewed 2 people for the site, they were really nice about it, surprisingly…

Shoutout to skull902 and Dreaded.

The last big review series before retiring or leaving on hiatus or whatever the fuck was the review for the Gwenpool series of big '25. It was very fun writing these reviews as the books were coming out but I felt like I just skimmed through the comics and didn't go into painful detail… But still, re-reading the comics, I realized that I was absolutely right, and that this series is a fucking piece of shit.

12.3. Ideas that never made it.

Around 2023, I was getting into Evangelion, and I wrote a pretty good review of the first 2 episodes, but I never actually finished it and it never came out.

Darby gwenstacying gave me this idea for making these powerpoint presentations where I yap about shit, but I never made one.

Another idea I had was making a zine, and I was gonna make one, but just like with everything I'm gonna mention here, I never fucking made it.

I really wanted to make a plush series continuation of skull902's Spider-Man series that was canceled, but I ultimately decided that finishing another man's series is not a good idea.

I really wanted to make a post detailing my love for Susan Storm but that idea ultimately ended up being a subcategory in this document.

I had this idea for music reviews, but it'd be like "Eddie's Guide to Weird Al" and "Eddie's Guide to the Red Hot Chili Peppers" and I'd explain full albums track by track, and it'd be funny as shit.

At one point I wanted to write a story about a superhero (totally original character) that could beat monsters and gods but wasn't able to beat a specific criminal.

Other Eddie's Guide type posts were gonna be about Daredevil, and other stuff I don't remember.

My buddy Abraham wanted to make this film called Thanos Plush, which was about Thanos Plush fighting other toys. This got far enough to make some mockup trailers and even an entire YouTube channel, but it was unfortunately canceled. I believe my pal John also wanted to make a Hulk Plush movie but that never got past the idea stage.

Me and my brother were pitching a story about cowboy furries, but I never scripted anything. I believe we also wrote like 2 pages of a movie script that had literally every 2003 movie trope.

Tried to remake the Spider-Plush document… I think I'll still finish that.

I have like a few minutes of footage from a very early version of Spider-Plush 2 the movie… I also really wanted the third movie to be like a Venom film, or a film where Spidey fights Lizard, but I don't have a Black Suit Spidey or an alligator plushie…

There were some early plans for a Spider-Plush 4 but I didn't get far.

I tried many times to make a comic strip for my silly little twitter, but I never made it. I also really tried hard to make SpiderCide myself, because Joel STILL HASN'T SENT ME THE FILM.

For a shitty April Fools joke, I was gonna write a fake Spider-Man 4 script, but it ended up being 30 pages, and I was super disappointed so I never did anything.

Wrote a list of YouTubers I'd eat lunch with, but never published it or anything due to fear of being thought of as weird or something.

Was gonna review Sonic Adventure 2 because I was gonna praise it a lot, but never figured out how…

I tried writing crackfics, like one where I got a shit ton of characters for an Avengers-like team, but then I never did anything.

Chapter 13. Reflecting and other thoughts I had while writing.

Daily Spider-Plush was and is a joke page, what the fuck am I supposed to reflect on? That’s a good question.

I suppose I can share some pet peeves, it's not really a reflection but it's similar enough. Just like with Chapter 12, these are presented in no particular order.

I talked about lack of inspiration and demotivation a few chapters ago, and I really would like to complain about writer's block.

There are 3 reasons why I stopped updating the wix site after a while…

1. Writer's block. Every time I think I have like the next 10 big ideas, I never actually know how to develop them other than a few jokes.
2. I came to the realization that nobody likes to read or even look at fan websites anymore. An alternative for this would be YouTube videos but I'm not sure if many people would be interested in another comic book Recap channel.
3. Google SEO does not show any of my websites, so at this point I was just talking to a fucking wall. I like putting my opinion out there but that is totally pointless if no one is able to see it.

What bums me out is that now I have a shit load of ideas I wanna do but I don't feel motivated to do any of them, so now there's like 50 reviews, all bottled up.

At school, every time I pull out a comic book or open twitter, I read peacefully and happily, but then I realize “Eddie, you're 18 years old and in college, you can't keep reading this shit. You're a grown man, act like it” and then stop reading. I made a scale for comics I'd be embarrassed to read publicly and I'll talk about it some other time.

I love the schedule function on Twitter and Tumblr, but scheduling too many things is kinda scary to me because if I die, no one would really know because the posts would still be coming out.

Leaving school at 10 PM sucks, I don’t have any friends to talk to on the way home and by the time I get home and want to talk about my day, everyone is asleep, and I'm the only schmuck that's up late.

I suppose since this is nearly the end of the memoir, I guess it wouldn’t do a little harm if I talked about what I have planned for the future… However, it is not guaranteed that any of these things will actually happen…

Been trying to learn how to edit so I can make YouTube videos some time in the next 2 or so years… I think that’s about it, really.

Credits.

Eddie would like to give special thanks to:

- My wonderful family, my mother, my father, my grandparents, my brother, my sister, my cousins, and all of their friends. (I'm not sure if I can name them, but I think they're cool guys)*
- My friends Andres, Sebastian, Montserrath, Karla, Chuy, Liz, and all of their friends. Also, I'd like to thank all the wonderful people I met in high school. I couldn't have asked for a better class to be in and I'll never forget what you guys did for me.*
- My wonderful team on my abandoned website, Camden, Starlight, and Polly. You guys are very helpful and I really appreciate that you guys bothered to write on my silly website and I'm so glad to have you guys as friends.
- The YouTubers I watched in 2023, like skull902, Trip, Vindo (formerly known as SuperVintendo64), TailsThePrower71, BrentZone, DizzyDennis, and many, MANY others.*
- The former admins for Daily Spider-Plush, KlonoaPrime and snakes4poole, you guys are awesome-tastic and you did a very good job.
- The Daily Crew, thanks to Dylan, Abraham, TurdInTheWind18 (John), Owen, Mat Chat, Raul, Kaine, Ali (br0_0m), Daily Symbiote Spider-Man, Daily Superior Spider-Man, Daily 67 Spidey, and Ian.*
- Draw Bored, my first follower ANYWHERE.
- BluePointPurple and Jayden (anarchist duck) of Spider-Figures, they're pretty cool.
- My current college class. I don't know them very well and they barely even know me, but I think we're chill enough to the point where I can mention them in this document.
- My favorite Twitter follower, you know who you are.
- All the people I interviewed. Which means they get thanked twice.

*Uhm, if you weren't mentioned here, please don't take it personal and hey, maybe if you ask nicely, I can put you in the updated version or the inevitable biopic.
Or you can use that little imagination of yours and just pretend that you're mentioned here.

To reiterate, for any questions about anything here, let me know via any of my contacts, which can be found here:

Twitter: aSpiderManFan1 and aSpiderPlush
Instagram: aspidermanfan1
Email: eddiespiderplushfanmail@gmail.com
Discord: spiderplushie2

I guess I gotta have a final message for this thing… Well, I think we've learned absolutely fucking nothing here, but always remember to be good people and that you'll always make it through, even if you think you're at the lowest point.